City of Helena – DRAFT Percent for Public Art Ordinance for HPAC discussion

This draft ordinance is modeled after Bozeman and Missoula Percent-for-Art programs, with comments and placeholders for Helena’s context. Comments appear inline in brackets to highlight policy choices, deviations from other city models, and points for review by city staff or legal counsel.

Section 1. Purpose & Intent

The purpose of this ordinance is to integrate public art into Helena’s capital projects, enrich community character, and establish a funding mechanism.

Commented [RA1]: Mirrors Bozeman and Missoula intent language, adapted to Helena’s advisory board structure.

Section 2. Applicability; Exemptions

Applies to city capital improvement projects with construction cost exceeding $X00,000.

Commented [RA2R1]: $500,000 / $250,000 / $100,000

Section 3. Percent Allocation, Use, and Budgeting

Allocates [1% placeholder, option up to 1.5%] of eligible project construction costs to public art. At least 80% on-site, up to 20% into Public Art Trust Fund for maintenance.

Commented [RA3]: What sort of capital improvement projects make the most sense for Helena?

Commented [RA4R3]: What sort of exceptions would make the most sense for Helena? sewer, utility, sidewalks...

Commented [RA5]: Comment: Bozeman uses 80/20 split at 1%; Missoula recently raised to 1.5% to cover maintenance.]

Section 4. Definitions

Defines construction cost, capital improvement project, artist, artwork, and Public Art Trust Fund.

Commented [RA6]: Comment: Based closely on Bozeman’s ordinance, adapted for Helena’s terminology.

Section 5. Process & Roles

The Helena Public Art Committee (HPAC) is advisory. – A representative from HPAC presents the annual public art report to the Commission. - The Community Facilities Manager (staff liaison) presents selected art/artists (as chosen by a selection committee) to the Commission for approval. - The City Manager (or designee) retains administrative responsibility.

Commented [RA7]: This differs from Bozeman, where the City Manager directly administers; here, Helena’s liaison role is explicit.]

Section 6. Ownership, Maintenance, Deaccession

All artworks are City property. Maintenance plans required. Deaccessioning or relocation requires HPAC review and Commission approval.

Commented [RA8]: Comment: Consistent with Missoula’s process; review needed by Facilities/Parks for ongoing maintenance responsibilities.

Section 7. Reporting, Oversight, Accountability

Annual report delivered by HPAC representative to the commission. Staff liaison ensures Commission receives project-specific artist recommendations.

Additional Comments for Review:

- Finance Department: confirm handling of trust fund and accounting.
- Legal Department: review deaccessioning, contracting authority, and conflicts of interest.
- Facilities/Parks: confirm maintenance responsibilities and long-term funding needs.
- Planning/CIP: align threshold and project categories with capital improvement definitions.

Commented [RA9]: Clarifies split duties. Commission should determine reporting cadence (annual vs project-specific) .

The mural consists of three distinct panels. The first section is defined by an older woman, representing a pioneer. Here you'll also find a school teacher and an artist who commemorate the women who came out west to bring education and stability to the frontier. The main focus of the second panel is the image of a mother with her baby. The model was Helenan Debi Corcoran and her son Eli, who was born as the mural was being designed. This panel also features storefronts and a few other notable characters.

The bronze statue of a man cracking a whip on Helena's Downtown Walking Mall celebrates the 19th century equivalent of the modern-day truck driver. Called by the highly evocative name of "Bullwhacker," the statue celebrates the men (and a few women) who drove often reluctant oxen to transport supplies from Fort Benton down Mullan Road to the gold camps in Helena.

DID YOU KNOW? The Helena Public Art Committee was formed in 1998 after local artist Becky Eiker offered to donate this statue to the City of Helena. In response, the City Commission created an advisory group of artists, businesses, arts administrators, and community members.

This mural honors Livery Square's transformation at the turn of the 19th century—from horse livery to auto carriage—through abstracted wagon wheels, classic cars, and the people who made it possible. Bob Stanley, one of the Four Georgians, gold prospector and an early Helena investor, is prominently featured against Mt. Helena.
